WELL LIVED CITIZEN

04 — CURATED RESALE & CONSIGNMENT

Is it cool? Is it sellable? Will they even take it?

Piece-by-piece curation from someone who knows the platforms. For the things that still have value, story, or second-market potential — without asking you to become a part-time reseller.

This service is best for items that have been well cared for, still hold real market interest, or deserve thoughtful placement through story-led resale.

It is not a donation pickup substitute, bulk textile recycling service, or a shortcut for things that are no longer in resellable condition.

- Platform matching
- Buyer communication
- Routing and return logic
- Donation reroute when appropriate
- Monthly reporting and payout rhythm

The goal is to move the item into the right next life, not just the fastest sale.

Easy handoff and pickup

The handoff is intentionally easy. Depending on what makes the most sense for your week, items can move through:

- City pickup
- Route-based stop-ins
- Uber Business courier
- Building desk drop
- UPS Access Point
- Direct bag shipment or handoff during another project block

The philosophy is simple: why spend time coordinating a bag when it can be in my workflow and assessed for value by noon?

Item standards

This is a resale and curation service. It is not waste removal, donation hauling, contaminated textile removal, a recycling substitute, or a "please get rid of this for me" service.

The assumption is: these are things you took care of and know deserve another life. That is the spirit of this service.

The route depends on item type, buyer demand, story value, platform behavior, seasonality, and speed versus premium price goals.

Realistic resale timeline

This is a long game, not a fast-cash service. Most strong items sell within the first 90 days. Nearly everything with real demand finds its buyer within 6 to 9 months. The right expectation is: resale rewards patience, not urgency. If immediate cash is the priority, resale may not be the best route.
